Students Booked After Battling Police in Restaurant Brawl

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 18 (AP)—Five Dartmouth and Harvard students engaged today in a short-lived but furious struggle with Cambridge police in and outside of a Harvard Square restaurant.

When the police had subdued the students, the restaurant was badly damaged, one student was hospitalized, two patrolmen were hurt and four of the collegians were locked up.

The students were identified by the police as James W. Corman, 21 years old, of Philadelphia, and Charles C. Hoban, 21, of Chicago, both of Dartmouth; George M. Osgoodly, 21, of Evanston, Ill., Peter R. Fisher, 19, of Bayville, L. I., and Eben W. Keyes, 18, of Winchester, Mass., all of Harvard. Mr. Corman was treated for eye lacerations and other injuries.

The police said Messrs. Corman and Hoban became involved in a "friendly argument" while sitting in the restaurant with their host, Mr. Osgoodly. A fight broke out after another restaurant patron remarked about "the stupidity of students."

All five students face District Court arraignment tomorrow on charges of disturbing the peace and drunkenness.
